WHAT PARIS FEATURES

FOR COLD WEATHER WEAR

The long-predicted vogue for hat styles suggesting the Revolution, the Directoire and the First Empire periods is in full swing, asserting itself in both the hat foundations and their trimmings. Portrait shapes borrowed from the canvases of Seventeenth Century artists such as Rembrandt and Franz Hals are also prominently shown, usually simply trimmed, in order to show the artistic contours of the shapes to greatest advantage. The models sketched in Nos. 1 and 4 pertain to the portrait hat variety, and originate at Georgette's and Suzanne Talbot's respectively. No. 1 is a pastel-blue felt and is trimmed in a most unique manner with a folded ribbon strip, which extends from one side of the broad brim to the other. It is held in place at the top of the crown by a strip of kolinsky fur, which in turn supports a fan motif of pleated taffeta. No. 4 pictures a handsome Rembrandt hat of black velvet of generous dimensions, trimmed with two tassels motifs of black fancy feathers, one standing erect, the other lying flat on the right side of the brim. The smart model illustrated in Sketch No. 8 is also on the Rembrandt order, though greatly modernized, and originates at Georgette's. It is developed of plum-colored velvet and its rigidly turned up brim rever is held in position by a jaunty loop arrangement of satin ribbon in the tone of the hat, edged with white. Sketches No. 2 and 3 represent capelines of particular beauty of outline, both from Marie Louise. No. 2 is of Burgundy velvet and boasts a wide, flexible brim and a brush motif of hackle feathers with sautache finish as a garniture, while No. 3, a bisque-colored satin felt, has a crown band of burnt nageoir and a touffe of hackle, spreading out a tiny bit to the left of the brim.

The models shown in Nos. 5 and 6 and conspicuous by their newness of form. No. 5 is a black velvet piped in fuchsia panne and trimmed with three small curled ostrich tips in the same tone. These are fastened near the top of the center front of the crown, and are held in place by a flat ribbon pleating. The Girondin hat is shown at its best in Sketch No. 6—a satin beaver in deepest otter brown, with tall crown and tiny rolled brim, trimmed with a hedge of gourah, which is held in place by a narrow torsade of grosgrain ribbon.

Sketch No. 9 pictures an adaptation of the Henri de Navarre hat, interpreted by the Maison Lewis—a narrow brimmed little hat with immensely tall, sloping crown. It is developed of Russian green panne velvet and its front is adorned with a large oblong steel buckle, while two short, full ostrich tips droop from the back to the right side. The graceful Empire hat from Suzanne Talbot (No. 10) boasts a dainty wreath of flat pink roses, applied to the top of the softly draped black velvet crown. The stems of the flowers are held by a torsade of blue and black faille ribbon, tied in a bow-knot in front. The shallow brim is lined with pale pink taffeta, is turned up at the left side, and rests over a curtain frill of sheer white Valenciennes lace.
